

Teresa Britt, Director of Education at the Center for Healthcare Improvement and Patient Simulation at University of Tennessee Health Sciences Center, Memphis is the newly elected President of the Tennessee Simulation Alliance for 2017-2019.

The Tennessee Simulation Alliance (TNSA), was formed in 2007 and initially began as a means to provide Tennessee nurse educators a central location for communication, collaboration and sharing regarding simulation pedagogy. The current mission of this organization has changed as simulation has grown as an educational strategy in all healthcare provider programs and is also utilized in healthcare service settings. TNSA's current mission is to "improve patient safety and quality by supporting healthcare simulation programs in Tennessee with shared knowledge, resources, training, education and established partnerships with Academia, Government and Industry." Mrs. Britt is proud to lead the TNSA group at this very exciting time of global simulation implementation. For more information about the TN Sim Alliance go to <https://tnsim.org/>
